

Arts & Entertainment

Yolanda Johnson: The Personal is Historical

Yolanda F. Johnson performs the last in her Warner Library concert series this Saturday.

Krista Madsen, Patch Staff

Posted Tue, Sep 18, 2012 at 1:45 pm ET Updated Tue, Sep 18, 2012 at 2:56 pm ET

Reply

ADVERTISEMENT

Tarrytown opera singer Yolanda F. Johnson will be performing the last in her "Inspired Song" series of Warner Library concerts this Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

ADVERTISEMENT

The final thematic concept is: "Song as Personal and Historic Narrative." Johnson is planning "some very cool music," she said, including

"Frauenliebe und Leben" by Schumann (doing the entire cycle as the first act) and then a work by her friends and living composers, Jim Cohn and Nkeiru Okoye. Cohn plans to be in the audience.

Finally, Johnson said, she is "rounding it out with a bit of Mozart and some Spirituals and a few other things - including a peak at my jazz skills with 'God Bless the Child.'"

Find out what's happening in Tarrytown-Sleepy Hollow with free, real-time updates from Patch.

Your email address

Let's go!

For more information, see attached flyer.

Like us on Facebook | Follow us on Twitter | Sign up for our newsletter

ADVERTISEMENT

 Thank  Reply  Share

More from Tarrytown-Sleepy Hollow

Neighbor News | 29m